Nor e'er was fate so near a foil. Dryden.
2. [Feuille, French.] Leaf; gilding.
A stately palace, built of squared brick,
Which cunningly was without mortar laid,
Whose walls were high, but nothing strong nor thick,
And golden foil all over them display'd. Fairy Queen, b. i.
Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil,
Nor in the glittering foil
Set off to th' world, nor in broad rumour lies. Milton.
3. Something of another colour near which jewels are set to raise their lustre.
As the black silk cap on him begun
To set for foil of his milk-white to serve.
Like bright metal on a fullen ground,
My reformation glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Than that which hath no foil to set it off. Shak. Hen. IV.
The fullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home. Shakespeare.
'Tis the property of all true diamonds to unite the foil closely itself, and thereby better augment its lustre: the foil is a mixture of mastic and burnt ivory. Grew's Museum.

over another.
To FOIN. v. n. [poindre, Fr. Skinner.] To push in fencing.
He hew'd, and lath'd, and foin'd, and thunder'd blows,
And every way did seek into his life;
Ne plate, ne mail, could ward so mighty throws,
But yielded passage to his cruel knife. Fairy Queen, b. ii.
He cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out:
he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman,
nor child. Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. i.
Then both, no moment lost, at once advance
Against each other, arm'd with sword and lance:
They lath, they foin, they pass, they strive to bore
Their corsets, and the thinnest parts explore. Dryden.
FOIN. n. f. [from the verb.] A thrust; a push.
FOININGLY. adv. [from foin.] In a pushing manner.
FO'ISON. n. f. [poison, Saxon.] Plenty; abundance. A word
